RE: Letter of support

In my capacity as the Chair of Communication Design at Swinburne University of Technology, I support the Melbourne Printing Museum and its founder Michael Isaachsen in his invaluable effort to preserve the skills and tools of early and recent printing craftsmanship in Australia.

The museum's unique and comprehensive collection of historic and modern printing equipment is an important educational resource. It enables design students, communication professionals and the wider Australian community to understand not only the history but also the future of this strategic creative industry.

I am convinced that knowledge of the history of printing and typesetting is at the core of preparing our workforce for changes in the global economy for generations to come.

Yours sincerely
